Customer Reviews

We own a number of books in the "Goodnight World" series. My kids love them and so do I. They aren't stories as much as they are simple sentences saying "good morning" to different things at the beginning and "good night" or "good evening" at the end. What makes the books really special are the illustrations because they are full of things to talk about with kids. And, when kids get to the age that they want to tell stories, they can talk about all of the things they see even if they can't read. The books usually highlight famous areas or attractions, animals and activities in each geographical location. I was so excited when I got this book because I was expecting to see things my sons could relate to in our new state. Unfortunately, this book is huge disappointment. First of all, the illustrations are very basic, almost amateur. Instead of being full of things to talk about, the illustrations are about just what is written. Instead of having lots of interesting things to see, the book is full of "lists"; the names of professional sports teams in Arizona, types of cacti and plants and animals. And the pictures of the athletes have absolutely nothing to do with Arizona, they aren't wearing the team colors, they don't show the mascots, they could be athletes from any state. There isn't anything to talk about or to expand on the simple sentences. Not only that, but one of the things mentioned in the book is the "golden aspens beautiful in autumn." Yes, they have aspen here but is Arizona really known for this? No.
