Dominic O'Brien has put together the finest audio memory course available. Period. This is the best audio training course I have listened too. If I may, let me comment on the description of the course. From websites, including Amazon, they do a poor job of describing this course. Precisely because this is such a richly detailed memory course, the descriptions do not give it proper due. Aside, the entire course runs approximately 6.5 Hours. This is a high quality educational product, including production, audio, information, instruction, exercises, and learning. I cannot give enough praise here. So, in finishing my praise, let me mention to you what is included with this course and show you why I enjoyed it so much. From the beginning, I especially liked the speed of the course; it is nice and slow. Even methodical, not hurried like many Spanish audio courses I have listened too. Because of Dominic's tremendous communication ability, I gained insights that were not available from reading his books. Dominic has an English accent and this lends to the presentation of the course in exceptional ways. The more I think about it, I found this to be an important feature of the course. Because of Dominicâ€™s communication ability, I fully experienced his view on memory. Also, in doing this, I came away with an entirely different perspective on the techniques he uses. I will state, in being an experienced user of mnemonics, there are not many new techniques available from the course; they have been presented in one form or another from the countless books on the market. However, Dominicâ€™s presentation and packaging of his techniques are the life-blood of the series. His presentations gave me confidence in understanding of the techniques I rarely use.
